The beans and corn were loose and runny while the chicken was moist and thick with small chunks of meat visible. Client #6's milk was initially nectar thick as he began drinking it from his glass. Towards the end of the meal, the client began using a spoon to scoop his milk from the glass as the milk had thickened to a pudding consistency. As client #6 finished his meal, he began coughing. A staff next to him hit him on his back twice. He continued to cough while leaving the table and removing his dishes from the table. During the meal, the client consumed his food quickly putting large spoonfuls of food in his mouth. A staff next to him gave the client sporadic verbal prompts to "slow down"; however, he was not consistently prompted to drink any liquids between spoonfuls of food. During breakfast observations in the home on 7/3/18 at 7:37am, client #6 consumed Turkey sausage, a waffle, mixed fruit, and oatmeal. The oatmeal was dry and thick while the Turkey sausage was finely chopped and dry. The client also consumed orange juice, milk, prune juice and water. The liquids initially resembled a nectar type consistency as client #6 picked up his glass to drink. Towards the end of the meal, the drinks were thick and pudding like when consumed by the client using a spoon. The client immediately coughed after drinking the water. Interviews on 7/3/18 with staff revealed the following regarding client #6's food/drink consistency and mealtime behaviors: Staff C revealed client #6's food goes in the blender for a pureed consistency. The staff indicated his liquids are "thickened ...so he won't get strangled." Additional interview revealed client #6's liquids should be a "pudding" consistency. The staff also indicated the client will cough at times during meals and they usually prompt him to keep coughing to clear his throat. Further interview indicated client #6 "eats fast" and the only mealtime guidelines they follow are to monitor client #6 at meals and tell him to "slow down." Staff A revealed client #6 gets a pureed diet and pudding thick liquids. The staff stated they add his food to a blender and the food "should be smooth".
