Several modifications will be implemented, including revisions to existing policies, amendments to financial agreements, and updates to client rights to accurately reflect available housing options. Program rules were adjusted to clarify that treatment services and the residential component are not tied together as a single program, but clients must reside in a sober living environment of their choosing in order to enroll in the day treatment program, but there will be a clear delineation between day treatment services and the clients' living situation such that the two will not be related or coordinated. Phone usage and outside meeting attendance in the residences will no longer be linked to participation in the treatment program, and program documents were updated to clearly state that participation in the day treatment program requires housing in a sober living environment. However, staff will be trained and the policy will be clear that participants in day treatment have the right to select any sober living environment and that no specific sober living environment is required to participate in the program. Sober living refers to a structured, substance-free housing environment designed for individuals recovering from substance use disorder (SUD). These residences provide a safe and supportive setting where individuals can continue their recovery after inpatient treatment or while participating in a substance use disorder program.

Most sober living homes have curfews, required house meetings, and expectations regarding employment, treatment participation, or attendance at recovery meetings. In rare instances clients may remain at their homes if the home supports the structure and success needed for sober living. Continued participation in the day treatment program will not be contingent on a client remaining at any particular sober living environment but if a patient is not allowed to live in their current sober living housing they will be required to find a different sober living environment to continue in the program. Additionally, website content will be updated within 30 days to remove language suggesting on-site living and 24/7 monitoring, ensuring a clear distinction between off-site housing and treatment services. The program's length of stay will be described as based on medical necessity rather than a predefined 30- to 60- day time-frame. To support these changes, marketing and support staff will receive further training to ensure accurate representation of program services, housing options, and length of stay. A new financial agreement has been implemented to clarify that the day treatment services are separate from any living arrangement and staff will no longer provide 24/7 monitoring at the apartments, which are managed and operated by a separate legal entity under a separate agreement with its own rules

Several modifications will be implemented, including revisions to existing policies, amendments to financial agreements, and updates to client rights to accurately reflect available housing options. Program rules were adjusted to clarify that treatment services and the residential component are not tied together as a single program, but clients must reside in a sober living environment of their choosing in order to enroll in the day treatment program, but there will be a clear delineation between day treatment services and the clients' living situation such that the two will not be related or coordinated. Phone usage and outside meeting attendance in the residences will no longer be linked to participation in the treatment program, and program documents were updated to clearly state that participation in the day treatment program requires housing in a sober living environment. However, staff will be trained and the policy will be clear that participants in day treatment have the right to select any sober living environment and that no specific sober living environment is required to participate in the program. Sober living refers to a structured, substance-free housing environment designed for individuals recovering from substance use disorder (SUD). These residences provide a safe and supportive setting where individuals can continue their recovery after inpatient treatment or while participating in a substance use disorder program. Most sober living homes have curfews, required house meetings, and expectations regarding employment, treatment participation, or attendance at recovery meetings. In rare instances clients may remain at their homes if the home supports the structure and success needed for sober living.

Additionally, website content will be updated within 30 days to remove language suggesting on-site living and 24/7 monitoring, ensuring a clear distinction between off-site housing and treatment services. The program's length of stay will be described as based on medical necessity rather than a predefined 30- to 60- day time-frame. To support these changes, marketing and support staff will receive further training to ensure accurate representation of program services, housing options, and length of stay. A new financial agreement has been implemented to clarify that the day treatment services are separate from any living arrangement and staff will no longer provide 24/7 monitoring at the apartments, which are managed and operated by a separate legal entity under a separate agreement with its own rules
